Profile:

An expert in real estate management and maintenance, and reasonable standards of care for commercial properties (retail centers, office buildings, industrial buildings, medical buildings, etc.) including inspection and maintenance procedures, landlord premises liability, financial reporting and fiduciary duties.

As an expert witness since 2015, I have been engaged on a multitude of cases involving reasonable standards of care for landlords and property managers, fiduciary duties and related topics for commercial properties by attorneys representing both plaintiffs and defendants. My area of focus pertains to a landlord's/property manager's duty to perform regular, documented property inspections, to diligently act on the findings of such inspections and to maintain a reasonably safe and secure property at all times.

I have been actively and directly involved in the management of real estate since 1984, first as a property manager and later as a property management supervisor, management company co-owner and top executive for national management companies.

Since 2011, I have been actively involved in the education and training of real estate professionals through the Institute of Real Estate Management (IREM®) and the Building Owners and Managers Association International (BOMI®). As an instructor for both of these prestigious organizations, teaching accreditation courses in property maintenance, risk management, ethics and finance, I have helped hundreds of real estate professionals advance their understanding and application of these topics. In 2016, I was President of IREM Chapter 22 in Sacramento, California.

Since 2018, I have been an Adjunct Professor teaching Real Estate Principles courses at the University of California at Sacramento (formerly on faculty) and since 2020, at the University of Tennessee Chattanooga.

I am also an Instructor for Colibri Group, teaching pre-license real estate courses in Tennessee.

I am an active real estate licensee in both California and Tennessee.
